Local woman breaking down barriers within the ag industry

■ Daniel Bushman

With a passion for agriculture, a desire to grow and share her experiences within the industry and a steadfast advocate for mental health, Lesley Kelly has not only rooted herself in farming but hopes that her journey will inspire others.

Raised on a farm southwest of Watrous, the same farm she now operates with her husband Matt and brother Derek, Lesley understands the value of being able to share her story with others. "I am so grateful for this rural and farm life, both in how I was raised and how I am able to raise my kids in a rural farming community like Watrous. My dad was always excited about opportunities for the farm and industry. He would share how others within the industry, whether it was learning something new from someone and getting a new idea, leaning on a neighbour during a stressful period or having coffee and sharing some laughs, helped him get through hard times on the farm. That really had an everlasting impact on me."

Moving back home a few years ago from Regina with her husband and their two boys to be closer to family and the farm, Lesley was able to garner stories which she began passing along. Stories of seeking support from others within the agriculture industry. Stories of facing adversity when times are tough. Stories of connecting with others and helping them along their journey. And personal stories of her own, including her and husband Matt's mental health journey and the loss of her dad, who was instrumental in her life and running the farm.

"I know in rural communities, many of our farmers are going through difficult times and due to the nature of our work and in rural areas, it is hard to access mental health resources and support. My hope and goal in sharing my family and I's story and advocating for farming and mental health is that there is more awareness and support in rural areas. Then when my kids are older (and potentially farm) and go through hard times, we have broken down the stigma around mental health and there is more help and support available for them."

That journey of opening up and allowing others to know they are not alone first began for Lesley about seven years ago. Creating a snack food business, Kelly and her family had the unique ability to connect with shoppers while expanding their products into urban areas. Through that, questions began to crop up about farming and how things were grown. As people started to understand how operations worked, Lesley shared others would voice their concern about how farming was being done and the harm it was causing to the environment and animals. "This was quite upsetting to us at the time as we didn't get the chance to share more of our farming story, answer their questions and dispel myths."

Wanting to place an immense focus on explaining stories from the world of agriculture and having a background in communications and marketing, Kelly created a blog. As social media began to really take off and with people curious about how their food was grown, the creator of High Heels & Canola Fields became more active online. "I had a goal of creating conversations about farming, share why I love this industry and what goes on behind the scenes on a Saskatchewan grain farm to help dispel myths and misconceptions."

Planting the seed online, it did not take long before her blog not only sprouted and bloomed but grew exponentially. "Shortly after starting my blog and sharing both our farm story and my husband and I's mental health journeys, we received thousands of messages from across Canada, the world and both in and outside of agriculture from those who were looking for help but didn't know where to start or who felt reluctant to share because of the stigma. We realized how so many of us in agriculture were struggling with our mental health, and there wasn't an organization dedicated to mental health in agriculture."

Making a difference

► Raised on a farm near Watrous, one she now helps operate with her husband Matt and brother Derek, a few years ago, Lesley Kelly began to share her passion for agriculture with others. Along with educating people about the industry, Lesley is also an advocate for mental health, creating the blog High Heels & Canola Fields along with launching the DoMoreAg Foundation. Through her experiences, Lesley has been able to speak at a number of events throughout North America, sharing about the ag industry and mental health. She was also recently awarded with a Queen Elizabeth II Platinum Jubilee Medal for her many contributions.

Signs of spring

► After what felt like a lengthy winter, the warmer temperatures arrived and the spring melt began this past week. While it is not the most enjoyable time of year for those dealing with allergies, seeing the water flow once again at Wellington Creek at Manitou Beach (pictured left) and the geese returning from their winter vacations (above) are indications that spring is here. According to Environment and Climate Change Canada the normal daytime high for this time of year is 11°C while the overnight low is pegged at -2°C.

Mar. 31, the Saskatchewan Weekly Newspapers Association announced its finalists for the 2023 Better Newspapers Competition. This year, The Watrous Manitou was recognized as a finalist in seven categories while its sister paper, the Lanigan Advisor was named in three.

In the Premier Awards Category, for The Watrous Manitou, Alexandra Dengler was named a finalist for Best Series of Advertisements for her work on the Centennial Ford full page advertisements. Also for The Watrous Manitou, Daniel Bushman was named a finalist for three stories and three photos which include: Best Sports Story for an article on Joe Koza; two in the Best News Story of the Year category for a pair of storms which caused substantial flooding and for the tornado touching down in the local area; Best Black and White Photo; Best Wildlife Photo; and Best Sports Photo.

For the Lanigan Advisor, Daniel was a finalist for two stories and one photo which included:

Best Sports Story for an article on the SJHL Hall of Fame inducting local faces; Best Healthcare Coverage Series of Stories for articles related to local hospital disruptions; and Best Colour Photo.

Honoured and thrilled to see both newspapers included as part of SWNA's Better Newspapers Competition finalists, publisher Daniel Bushman said being recognized with other publications from across the province is a real privilege. "I want to extend my appreciation to those who took the time to judge our work and select us as finalists.

Having been a judge myself, it is not an easy task and being recognized is something we never take for granted."

Grateful to the staff at the newspapers and the work that they do, Daniel said, "My wife Kim and I are so proud of Alexandra for being named a finalist this year. She has done a tremendous job for us over the years and because of the great work she does, it was awesome to see her recognized this year. We are also so grateful for Laurie Regier and all that she has done for us over the years. Laurie has been with us right from day one and we are so thankful for her dedication and tremendous efforts over the years. Both have been such an important part of our team and we are so grateful to have them."

Wanting to provide a product that people can not only enjoy but stay informed about what is happening in their communities, Daniel added, "Both of our weekly newspapers have contained award winning items over the years and it is our hope to continue to provide our readers with that type of quality moving forward. Being recognized on a provincial level is certainly a really big honour and we cannot do it without our amazing staff and without the support we receive by our readers and advertisers. Thank you!"

This year the Better Newspapers Competition Award winners will be announced during an online award presentation Friday, May 12th.

MSMA Advantage fostering a think big mindset across region

■ media release

The member communities of the Mid-Sask Municipal Alliance (MSMA) are scheduled to meet with the Honourable Minister Don McMorris of Government Relations at the end of April to advocate for economic development resources to build the capacity to coordinate collaboration across public, private and non-profit sectors, mobilize the region's assets, and discover new approaches to increase prosperity through this next period of regional growth.

In preparation the MSMA board is reaching out to provincial and municipal governments, businesses, industry, regional organizations, First Nations, and NGOs requesting a show of support for this initiative. To help foster a "think big" mindset, the MSMA is prepared to facilitate bringing all the necessary voices to the table on a regular basis to create a progressive future for the region.

"The landscape of our region has the potential for prosperity and growth. Now is the time to be proactive and develop a sustainable strategy for success. The MSMA Advantage is a collaborative partnership aimed at stimulating strategic economic development initiatives and being a collective regional voice. By attracting new residents, businesses, and industry into our region we can showcase to Saskatchewan and the rest of the world why this is an ideal place to invest, work, and live," said Erin Richard, Chairperson of the Mid-Sask Municipal Alliance.

With the necessary resources, the region could establish the capacity to develop a regional growth strategy as a collaborative and interactive process, develop community strategies to manage the next decade of growth by building on the foundational work completed to date, and facilitate a plan to successfully manage and maximize the influx of new residents and business investments into the region. There would also be value in establishing a regional brand and a social media campaign to promote the communities and business opportunities across the region and highlight the advantages of living and working in rural Saskatchewan.

To find out more about the project or to connect to this initiative, email msma@sasktel.net.

Ingredients:

1 1/2 cups flour
1 cup rolled oats
1/2 cup brown sugar
1 1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. salt
2 large eggs
4 tbsp. applesauce OR 4 tbsp. oil
1 tsp. vanilla
1/4 cup milk
4 mashed bananas
3/4 cup chocolate chips
1/3 cup chopped walnuts or pecans

Directions:

Line a muffin pan with liners (use parchment liners) or pan spray the muffin pan. Preheat oven to 375°F. Combine oats, flour, brown sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. In another bowl beat the bananas, then add the eggs, applesauce (or oil if you are using oil), milk and vanilla. Pour wet into dry ingredients, mixing with a spoon until just combined. Fold in chocolate chips. Divide batter into 12 muffin cups, the cups will be full. Depending on the size of the bananas, you may have 14 muffins. If using a partly filled muffin pan, fill the empty spaces about 1/4 full of water so your pan does not warp. Bake for 20 to 22 minutes.

on it. My tea not only melted the finish on the dining room table, but the heat melted the ink onto the table! Because hindsight is always 20/20, I realize now how stupid it was to think that a thin piece of paper would protect the table against something so hot! If you can help me fix this mistake, I would really appreciate it. Maria

Dear Maria,

Dear Reena,

I was enjoying a cup of very hot tea one morning. The tea was so hot that I had to put it down on the table. I had no coasters around me, so I grabbed the closest thing which was a sheet of paper with some writing in blue ink

Boy have I been there! The first and easiest solution is to apply mayonnaise or non-gel, non-bleach toothpaste to the wood. Leave for 30 minutes and wipe. If the stain remains, cover the mark with a white cloth. Using the steam setting on your clothing iron, wave the iron overtop of the cloth making sure that you do not set the iron on one area. Even if the heat mark disappears, the ink may remain. If hairspray does not remove the ink, you can try baking powder and dish soap. Be cautious not to hurt the finish of the wood.

Carbon tax exemption bill for farmers passes House vote

■ media release

Conservative MP Ben Lobb's Private Members Bill C-234, which provides a total Carbon Tax exemption for farmers, was passed in the House of Commons with cross-party support. Moose Jaw-Lake Centre-Lanigan Member of Parliament Fraser Tolmie said this bill is a massive win for Saskatchewan farmers.

"From my first day on the campaign trail, the Carbon Tax has been a top issue for countless constituents throughout the riding, especially farmers and ag industry professionals." Tolmie said. "This bill provides them some much needed hope and relief at a time when new fertilizer regulations, high fuel costs, and stifling tax burdens have been threatening their livelihoods."

Tolmie also questions the Carbon Tax's ability to affect emissions outputs after years of failure.

"Our party is proud to have secured this important victory for farmers and our agriculture industry, but we can't stop there. The Carbon Tax makes life less affordable while doing nothing to reduce emissions. We will provide an environment plan that champions technology over taxation, one that will grow our economy while providing a clear path to a cleaner future."

He finally pointed out the importance of the cross-party support this bill achieved.

"As Mayor of Moose Jaw and now Member of Parliament, I've always done my best to reach across the aisle and work with people of different backgrounds to achieve common goals. I am grateful for the support of my colleagues from other parties who came around to our perspective; the Carbon Tax unfairly targets Canadian farmers who are already world leaders in sustainability."

Bill C-234 now moves on to the Senate where it is also expected to pass, bringing it one step closer to royal assent and becoming law.

Neighbourly advice according to Ed

A spiritual column by contributor Raymond Maher www.accordingtoed.com

In 1938, Frank Sinatra sang a song about commitment. The song was called Love and Marriage. The song expressed that love and marriage go together like a horse and carriage. It also claimed that you could not have one without the other.

Today, many might scoff at the song as old-fashioned and obsolete. Likewise, some scoff at Jesus' death and resurrection as Christians celebrate Good Friday, Apr. 7, and Easter Sunday, Apr. 9. I pray that you will be sure that Good Friday and Easter Sunday belong together. Jesus' death on the cross on Good Friday resulted in His Resurrection to eternal life on Easter Sunday. The cross plus the resurrection equals salvation for sinners.

Psalm 22 was written by David, but it paints a picture of what Jesus experienced during his crucifixion. Jesus was considered a worm, not a man, in his arrest, trials, lashes, crown of thorns, and suffering on the cross between two criminals.

He was scorned and despised, mocked and insulted by the people.

the law for us. He was willing to give to God his Father his righteousness for us and suffer the punishment of our sins in our place on the cross. Jesus was committed to enduring pain and punishment beyond measure for each of us as sinners.

Isaiah 53 reminds us that the Lord laid on his suffering servant (Jesus) the iniquity of us all. He was pierced and crushed for our transgressions. However, His punishment brought us peace in that by

They scoffed, "He trusts in the Lord; let the Lord rescue him." A band of evil men encircled him. They pierced his hands and feet. They cast lots for his garments. Indeed as the psalm indicates, Jesus was poured out like water and all his bones felt out of joint while nailed to the cross. His heart melted away like wax in his suffering until his death. (Psalm 22:6-8,16,18,14)

The Jews did not want the bodies left on the crosses during the Sabbath, so the soldiers broke the legs of the other men still dying on the cross to speed up their death. But Jesus was dead, so one of the soldiers pierced Jesus' side with a spear bringing a sudden flow of blood and his wounds; we are healed.

Jesus suffered on the cross until all was accomplished so that the Scripture was fulfilled; then Jesus said, "I am thirsty." He was given a drink of wine vinegar, and after the drink, he proclaimed, "It is finished." Then he bowed his head and gave up his spirit." (John 19:28-30)

The tomb could not hold Jesus. Jesus Christ is God, and He is risen indeed. Christians believe in the risen Christ who promises, "Because I live, you shall live also." (John 14:19 and John 11:25). Good Friday and Easter Sunday are at the heart of our Christian faith.

water. (John 19:26-34)

Joseph of Arimathea placed the body of Jesus in his own new tomb cut out of rock. He rolled a large stone in front of the tomb's entrance. The Jews went to Pilate and asked for the vault to be secured. The soldiers went and sealed the tomb door and posted a guard there.

The tomb could not hold Jesus. Jesus Christ is God, and He is risen indeed. Christians believe in the risen Christ who promises, "Because I live, you shall live also." (John 14:19 and John 11:25). Good Friday and Easter Sunday are at the heart of our Christian faith.

Having members of her family farming and understanding the intricacies and stressors producers are faced with in the agriculture industry, Kelly knew something more had to be done. That is when she joined up with a few others to create the Do More Agriculture Foundation.

With a mission to create more awareness about mental health, build community and connection and bring and create mental health resources and support, the co-founder said, "Through this work and while also advocating for agriculture, I have had the opportunity to travel and speak across North America and Europe, be invited on national and provincial news shows, be part of campaigns and work with companies that are focused on creating positive change."

The daughter of Darlene and the late Garnet Martin, Lesley also designed and started a clothing line, creating more awareness about mental health and farming while meeting hundreds and thousands of people to hear their stories. "I've connected with people after being on stage and they feel brave enough to come up and share afterwards or on social media through a message or video I've shared or at the airport after reading one of my shirts that states: 'Coffee, farming & mental health.'

What stands out is how every person's story matters so much and how we have so much in common. Our stories can help bring us together, heal and move forward."

With thousands of miles accumulated in her vehicle and on a plane and the countless hours dedicated to her blog, foundation and social media channels, when asked what it means to be making a difference, Lesley said, "Helping others and having a positive impact on others definitely fills up my cup. I never set out on making a difference in the ag industry but our overall goal in sharing our farm and mental health story was hoping that it helped one person. I'm so grateful that it's helped create positive change in

Creating positive change

►Understanding how stressful the agriculture industry can be and all that comes with it, Lesley Kelly has not only been a tremendous advocate for mental health but the Do More Agriculture Foundation, something she helped to create, has been able to generate awareness about mental health. Through that initiative, Kelly has been invited to speak at conferences and events throughout Canada and the United States about mental health in agriculture.

our industry and for the support my family and I have received in return."

Reflecting back to when her journey first began, Kelly noted the agriculture industry has come such a long way in a short time. "Before we shared our mental health stories publicly, we searched online if there were others sharing as well and unfortunately, we couldn't find others." Once her and Matt began to open up though, Lesley said they received a huge positive reception. However, Kelly also indicated there was some negative feedback and criticisms that came with being vulnerable.

"That of course hurt at the moment as our goal was to help others who may be feeling alone and to help our industry get better and more support and resources. But now, those criticisms are seldom and the support outshines them. Now we are seeing open, honest and supportive conversations and awareness happening online, at events, within the media, at board and industry tables and meetings and at kitchen tables, which is so amazing and encouraging. We have also been cutting a trail for women in agriculture. Involved with organizations like the Sask Wheat Board of Directors, Lesley continues to push for positive change in an industry predominately led by men. "I am encouraged to see positive change with inclusivity and seeing more women become involved at the board level (there are two of us women on the Sask Wheat Board of Directors, out of seven) and have leadership roles within their farming operations and industry. Women are the heart of the industry and the farm in many instances and we have unique skills and traits that can help provide solutions, offer guidance, create opportunities and move farming businesses forward."

Similar to her skill sets on the family farm, Kelly brings a different perspective while working off of it as well. "I try to mentor and share what I've learned to help and encourage other females get involved in the industry as there is such a need for not only women, but young farmers at the industry level."

That work and those experiences have also extended to her own kids. "The tools and skills we've learned about taking care of our mental health has really helped us start and have conversations with our kids. I want them to have the confidence, tools and skills to be aware, communicate, connect and help each other and themselves when they are going through a hard time. We share with them that if they would like to farm one day, it's not if they will go through hard times but when, and we hope by what we are doing when they go through those hard times, that they will have a community around them that will support them and they will have more tools and resources too."

In addition to her tremendous work as an advocate for mental health and farming, Kelly has been through those events where the resident of Watrous has also been able to meet others doing similar work. "It is such a gift! From what I've learned in sharing, it can be so powerful and has such a positive, contagious effect. Personally, it has felt therapeutic to share and for others, encouraging and inspiring to know they aren't alone. It is so great agriculture industry over the past five or so years, experiences both on and off the family farm, and having a positive impact on others, Lesley was recently and deservedly recognized with a Queen Elizabeth II Platinum Jubilee Medal. "It was such a nice surprise. I was in the Seattle airport and a bit sleep deprived after being away on the road for a couple of weeks. I got an email that I had received the medal and when the ceremony was and thought it was spam. So I called the number to check and they said that I had been nominated. I phoned my husband and I cried. It was such a wonderful surprise and gesture of how far we've come as an organization and industry, and our impact."

A moment the producer and blog creator will not soon forget, reflecting back over her time advocating, speaking, representing women in the industry and sharing her own journey, Kelly said some of her biggest highlights have been the messages and stories received from others across the world. "Whether that is someone feeling inspired and encouraged to share, get further support, learn something or help someone else through a message or a post I've sent out or sharing their story with me and others after I've presented, that really touches me each and every time."

It has been through those events where the resident of Watrous has also been able to meet others doing similar work. "It is such a gift! From what I've learned in sharing, it can be so powerful and has such a positive, contagious effect. COLONSAY

Irene Gray • 306-255-2775

Jim and Irene travelled to Manitou Beach for an early birthday lunch at Murray and Kathleen Dering's.

The Colonsay Food Bank welcomed all the items that the Viscount School collected for them. They held a drive challenge with classrooms competing to see which classroom could collect the most to donate. The Gr. 1-2 students won the challenge.

Judy Dieno and daughter Annette travelled to Arelee to have an Easter gathering with Grant and Haughn and family Apr. 8.

Neil Thomas from Edmonton spent a week visiting his father Ray. He also spent some time with other friends in town.

Thursday, Apr. 6, the Colonsay Senior Centre saw 20 seniors gather for the monthly supper. It was an enjoyable Chinese supper from the Colonsay Hotel. A short meeting was held after supper then several enjoyed playing cards.

The Colonsay Sports Grounds Committee is looking for new members.

Several families held Easter gatherings and get-togethers over the weekend.

Forty-seven people enjoyed the poker night held in Alton Apr. 6. Some from Colonsay attended.

Jim and Joyce Walker travelled to Calgary to visit their son Stacey for a few days.

Jim and Irene Gray travelled to Saskatoon Apr. 9 to the home of Tyler and Venessa Hinz and enjoyed visiting, an Easter supper and to celebrate Irene's birthday. Also attending were Brenda and Kory Liang, Ben and Mu Ling and grandma from Unity.

Get well wishes to Jim Gray who is back in the hospital.

The gift of affection - be generous with appropriate hugs, kisses, pats on the back and handholds. Let these small actions demonstrate the love you have for family and friends.

Sandra Reid • 306-227-1193

Nice with the weather. Could have been earlier, but I am sure we all will take the sunshine our beautiful blue skies offer. Speaking of the weather, we had a lot of family arrive at our house Good Friday. We never realized what condition the highways were in. So glad they all made it out and returned to their homes safely. I saw pictures the next day and wow!

The month of April is National Poetry Month. At Viscount Central School the high school students shared original works and various favourite texts they had written or studied.

Tuesday, Apr. 4, the Viscount Central School Drama Club put on a fantastic performance of Skid Marks: A Play About Driving.

Monday, Apr. 10, there were four of us ladies that joined together to sew squares together for Blankets for Canada. We enjoyed visiting and sewing as much as always. It is a perfect time to come together and visit while doing something so awesome. Our time is nearing the end for the year. Blankets for Canada will have its last meet for this season Monday, Apr. 24 at the Viscount library and will resume again in the fall. Please feel free to think of us should you be looking to donate knitted or crochet squares. We have very much enjoyed meeting and working together all year and look forward to seeing everyone after a long-awaited summer.

Speaking of summer, I cannot wait to get out and enjoy the sunshine and do yard work. Of course it will have to dry up a bit, but it is melting fast. I was beginning to worry about the community garage sales that we are having the long weekend in May, but I think it should be melted by then.

Best wishes to anyone who is under the weather. I hope you feel better soon.

National Volunteer Week is Apr. 16 to 22. Where would our village and area be without the many volunteers who give so freely of their time? Much appreciation is extended to each one of you.

We hope students and teachers alike enjoyed the Easter break pausing to relax and rejuvenate. Now it is on to the last lap of the school year.

Does your mudroom look like mine with multiple seasons of footwear filling the shelves? Various winter boots, spring rubber boots and summer sneakers, all side by side, ready for the wearing depending on the weather conditions of the day.

You need to bring a hearty appetite when dining at The Big Rock Inn, Eat and Drinkery. The daily lunch specials are homemade and so delicious! What a treat for us to have a restaurant on Main Street!

Congratulations to The Watrous Manitou and Lanigan Advisor for being finalists, recognized a combined 10 times as part of the Saskatchewan Weekly Newspapers Association 2023 Better Newspapers Competition. Saskatchewan newspapers are alive and well tying our small towns and communities together. Well done Daniel Bushman and staff! With the online award presentation scheduled for May 12, know that we are rooting for you.

Enjoy your week!

U11 league champions

► After finishing first in the regular season, the Watrous Hawks U11 Team 1 started the East Central Minor Hockey League playoffs with a first round win over Strasbourg. Then with a close second round victory over Muenster, it set up a league final against Watrous Hawks U11 Team 2. With both teams only losing one regular season game all year to each other, it made for an exciting league final. Watrous Team 1 took game one with a 3-2 victory and in Game 2, the contest was tied 5-5 in the final moments. Watrous Team 2 pulled its goalie, needing the victory to force game three but Watrous Team 1 would score an empty net goal to seal the win and the league championship. Congratulations to both teams on successful seasons. to see how awareness and support is building through others sharing their stories. This is how we will break down barriers, the stigma and create further mental health capacity in our rural areas."

But despite all of the positives and gains within the industry, the work has not ended for Lesley. As the pandemic arrived three years ago, it created a whole new set of stressors. Navigating through those challenges both on and off the farm, with the bulk of 2023 remaining, including the start of seeding season, Kelly is optimistic about what may be ahead.

"My role on the farm has expanded since my dad passed away so I am really invested in learning all that my dad taught me, helping build what he grew and make a plan for the farm in the future. I look forward to staying involved with the industry at the board level and hope to present at a few conferences and events. I pinch myself because I get to travel to places that I've never been before like New York, Arkansas, and this year I am going to Montana for the first time and back to Texas. Our kids are active in sports and I love watching them play and have fun with their friends so that is always a highlight and top of the list."

While she has a lot on her plate as she continues to keep up with the demands in the agriculture sector, Lesley is quick to point out it is a dream come true to be where she is. "To raise our kids where I grew up and surrounded by family and friends I grew up with, I couldn't have asked for a better community to live, have our family grow and plant more roots."

To learn more about what Lesley is up to, people can find her across social media platforms under High Heels & Canola Fields and at www.highheelsandcanolafields.com. For more information and resources about mental health in ag, visit domore.ag.
